A warrant check that was performed during a traffic stop does not constitute a search of a passenger for purposes of the seatbelt law which says that the police cannot search a passenger solely for a violation. People v. Bailey, 314 Ill.Dec. 575, 874 N.E.2d 940(2007) The Second District Appellate Court found that a warrant check of a passenger is not a search. A warrant check during a traffic stop is viewed as an extension of a seizure. The court concluded that a warrant check was not barred by the seatbelt statute prohibiting searches solely based on a seatbelt violation. The key is that the warrant checks must be expeditious. The seizure should not last longer than the time reasonably required for a traffic stop.

A neglected child now includes one who has been provided with crisis intervention services and whose parent, guardian or custodian refuses to permit the child to return home and no other living arrangement agreeable to the parent, guardian or custodian has been made. 325 ILCS 5/3, PA 95-443 and 705 ILCS 405/2-3, effective 1/1/08.
